

Proposed increases in funding threatened

General Assembly looking to cut $27 million may target USM

News/Features Editor

SSU's Student Government Association (SGA) in cooperation with other student organizations representing student interests are organizing a letter writing campaign to convince members of Maryland's General Assembly not to cut Governor Paris Glendening's proposed eight percent increase in funding for higher education.

According to Kasey Schneider, SGA vice president of public relations, members of the SGA will be meeting with representatives from the Eastern Shore in two weeks to present a case for increasing funding to the University System of Maryland (USM).

Last semester the Board of Regents proposed a seven percent tuition increase for SSU because of shortcomings in state appropriations.

However, Governor Glendening introduced a budget to the General Assembly that would increase spending for higher education more than any other category in this year's budget.

The proposed funding would mean an increase of four percent this upcoming academic year, as well as tentatively capping tuition increases at four percent for the next three years.

Maryland currently ranks seventh in per capita income, according to Senior Corey Lee, SSU's representative to the USM Student Council, but only ranks 38 in public higher education funding.

Also, a new study conducted by the USM Board of Regents found that Maryland receives $1.74 in tax revenues for every dollar invested in the USM.

Currently, the General Assembly is trying to find ways to cut $27 million from Glendening's budget proposal, according to Lee.

Lee said that since education received the highest increase in funding, it is the first place lawmakers will look to reduce spending.

Rob Spivey, legislative assistant to SSU President Bill Merwin, said, "Things look okay for the system, but the system office is not taking any chances." Spivey said that one of the problems facing legislators is trying to decide where else to make the cuts. He said, "Sadly, we may have to look at other programs to cut."

The increased funding is aimed for use to address problems in the USM, especially faculty retention. According to Schneider, USM has difficulty retaining top notch faculty because other schools offer more money. SSU in particular has lost faculty or been turned down by potential faculty because it would require them to take less money to come here, said Schneider.

Seagull Century provides new Nautilus equipment

Hugh Bouchelle
Flyer Staff Writer

The Seagull Century committee has pledged nearly $25,000 to update the Nautilus Center in Maggs Physical Activities Center. The funds are earmarked to buy new equipment long desired by campus recreation to update the center.

"We average over 12,000 uses or participations of the Nautilus Center per semester, beyond the extensive use it gets from regular circuit training classes and use by SSU's athletic teams," said David Brown, director of campus recreation.

The Nautilus Center donation will result in four new recumbent bikes, four up-right bikes, two cross-trainer machines, (a combination lifecycle and stairmaster) and one badly needed treadmill. The new equipment will allow campus recreation to trade in some of the old equipment that currently drains the recreation budget with constant repairs. Brown hopes the equipment will arrive by this summer.

According to James L. Phillips, director of Public Safety and chairman of the Seagull Century committee, the new Nautilus equipment is only part of the benefit SSU receives from sponsoring the Seagull Century, an annual 100 mile bike tour.

The committee will also be donating about $9,500 to the Bellavance Honors program, $1,000 toward the New Student Experience trip to Acadia and about $500 to buy bicycle magazines for the library.

The local community will also benefit from the proceeds of the Seagull Century. Sixteen thousand dollars is going to Habitat for Humanity, a cause many SSU students have been involved with. Fifteen thousand dollars will be donated to Friends Of Wicomico County Lacrosse to buy equipment for county high school lacrosse teams.

Another $2,000 goes to the Wicomico County 4H program for a bicycle safety program to be conducted this spring and $1,000 will be donated to staff the SSU pool with lifeguards for the fourth grade water safety program conducted for county students.

"I believe the majority of the surplus profit should remain on campus where it has the potential to benefit the entire student body," said Brown. As a member of the Seagull Century committee, he had a part in the distribution of funds collected from entrance fees of the 5,540 riders who participated last year in the Seagull Century.

The efforts of the Seagull Century Committee are not only helping to advertise SSU nationally, but they are paying off in cash for all SSU students.

New residence hall is top priority of master plan

Rick Barnard
Flyer Staff Writer

Concerns about overcrowding on campus at SSU will be eased if the proposed master plan is approved, allowing a new residence hall to be built. According to Dr. Kathleen Grout, director of housing and residence life, more and more freshmen are deciding to stay on campus for their sophomore and junior years, which is creating a housing problem.

The master plan describes the physical direction SSU plans to take over the next 10 to 12 years. It evolved from the strategic plan, which stated SSU's administrative and academic goals. The strategic plan was approved last semester.

Among the changes to the campus proposed in the master plan is the removal of Potomac Hall, a renovation of Devilbiss Hall, the building of a replacement library and a renovation of the Rt. 13 entrances to give the campus a more formal look.

One major concern addressed by the plan is the increasing number of freshmen students being admitted to SSU each year. According to the Vice President of Administration and Finance Richard Pusey, the number of students is expected to increase 2 percent by the year 2002, meaning an additional 100 students could require housing. As of now there will not be enough space to

Hall. Two two-story modular buildings will house between 160 and 180 students until a new, permanent the rooms single occupancy to accommodate students seeking privacy. In that case, the Dogwood trailers may be sold off or used for some other purpose.

There are no definite estimates on how much the changes will cost since the details of the plan have yet to be decided on. Yobst did say that the plan calls for the new hall to be built by a private developer and that room fees would be used to pay the mortgage.

Yobst also said the Commons was built with a new residence hall in mind and does not feel the dining hall will be overcrowded. Pusey expects the new residence hall will be tied into the University Center. Once construction begins, Yobst said, the new building should be completed in 2 to 3 years.

Yobst stressed that the new residence hall is still just in the planning stages. The master plan must be reviewed and approved by the department of budget management and the Board of Regents which should occur in late March or early April. Yobst believes the master plan will be approved since the school analyzed every aspect of the plan.

Yobst, Pusey and Grout all believe that the numbers show that a new residence hall is necessary for the future of the campus. Meanwhile, according to Yobst, SSU President Bill Merwin is expected to make several presentations to answer questions and drum up support for the master plan.

Residence halls, such as Manokin Hall, face the prospect of overcrowding if a new residence hall is not approved as part of the master plan.

The master plan includes a potential short term and long term plan to deal with the problem without restricting or reducing the number of students allowed to live on campus.

According to Richard Yobst, associate vice president for administrative services, the short term plan calls for temporary housing to be put up at the north end of St. Martin residence hall can be constructed where the physical plant is currently located. The new residence hall will house 350 students and the physical plant would likely move to an undetermined off-campus site.

The fate of Dogwood Village has not yet been decided since the master plan calls for the area to be converted into a parking lot. It will either be moved to an off-campus location or it will be incorporated into the new residence hall, making at least 140-of

Student letter writing campaign being organized

SGA President John Pritchett will make presentations to budget and appropriation committees on the need for funding on Feb. 27 and March 4 at SSU.

Schneider encouraged students to contact the SGA if they are interested in how they can become involved in lobbying the General Assembly not to cut funding from Maryland's public colleges and universities.

Spivey said SSU has done well in making its voice heard in Annapolis, but it can always do better. Spivey mentioned the possibility of organizing a group of SSU students to visit Annapolis to make their case.

A decision is not expected by the General Assembly until sometime in March.

Students can make the difference in General Assembly vote on funding

In the next month, Maryland's General Assembly will vote on whether or not to invest in the state's future. Governor Paris Glendening has put a budget package before the lawmakers that includes an eight percent increase in funding for the University System of Maryland (USM), from which SSU receives its share of state appropriations.

If the students don't make their own education an important issue, it is difficult and naive to think that the lawmakers in Annapolis will do it for them. Issues like this are why legislators exist, to hear the opinions of those people who will be affected by their votes.

Today's students often complain about many injustices and a system that they feel does not represent them. Yet, it is impossible to be represented if you don't tell somebody with decision-making authority what you want. Elected officials are not mind readers.

Students at SSU should take this opportunity to make the system work.

While there is ample evidence that increasing funding for the USM is a good investment, including a new study that shows Maryland generates $1.74 in tax revenues for every dollar spent on the USM, the most compelling arguments come from students themselves.

Only students can tell legislators of the woes of having to work with antiquated equipment in the Richard A. Henson School of

Off campus residents the targets of thieves

Mike Snow
Flyer Staff Writer

So, you have decided to move off-campus. You can wake up and cook yourself a decent breakfast in your own house. No more sharing the bathroom with ten other people. Pictures, posters and perfect papers can even be nailed to the wall. Life's great, isn't it? Unless, you come home and find your house burglarized.

Burglary, or breaking and entering, is the most common crime committed in the U.S. Most of the homes that students rent in the Salisbury area are prime targets for this sort of back, the door was unlocked," said the tenant. After close examination, it was discovered that a pair of speakers and some loose change were missing from the house. "It's weird because we also have a nice TV, and I had a camcorder sitting out in the wide open," said the baffled tenant. The Salisbury Police were then called in to investigate the scene.

"Throughout January we saw a lot of break-ins in the Princeton Street area. About a dozen or so. Officers are still searching for suspects and investigating these cases," said Captain Willie of the Salisbury Police Department.

Police have seen an increase in the number of robberies of houses rented by students.

Princeton Street and the streets that surround it are heavily populated with Salisbury students. This, coupled with the fact that a majority of students leave for the duration of winter term, provides burglars with ample opportunity to wreak havoc.

Last semester, a home in the Vine Street area was burglarized while the tenants were upstairs. The burglars simply walked in to see if anyone was around and then proceeded to steal a television, VCR and radio.

The tenants upstairs had no clue of what was going on. One of the tenants looked out the window and saw two suspects jumping into a car with their possessions. "I screamed out the window for them to stop, and that caused one of them to drop the radio on the ground," said one tenant. Scared and stripped of about $5,000 in belongings, the tenants called Salisbury Police.

Another robbery also occurred last semester in the Vine Street area. The tenant came home and realized something was wrong. "I had locked the front door when I left, but when I came perform a community check," said Willie. For a period of time after the burglary, officers patrolling in that particular area will drive by to ensure the safety not only of the victim but the entire community. "A burglary victim should not have to feel threatened. It is a random crime that could happen to anyone," Willie explained.

If you are planning to move off-campus, you should not feel threatened by these criminals. Burglars are petty thieves searching for a way to make their day go faster, according to Captain Willie.

When choosing a house, make sure that it satisfies all safety concerns.

Tips for protecting your house from burglary

Securing Your Apartment

1. When the buzzer rings, always check the identity of the person(s) seeking entrance before releasing the latch on the lobby door.
2. Unknown or suspicious person(s) seeking entrance should be referred to the building manager.
3. Notify the manager when your suite will be empty.
4. Make arrangements with a neighbor or the building manager to receive deliveries if you will be out; do not leave notes on the lobby callboard or your door indicating you are away.
5. Make sure outside entrances are sufficiently lighted.
6. Shrubs that provide you privacy also give a burglar a place to hide; keep bushes low and prune trees up at least four feet.
7. Be neighborly; ask neighbors to report any suspicious persons or activities around your home to the police.

Securing Your Apartment While on Break

1. Inform the manager/landlord or a trusted neighbor of your departure and return dates and leave a telephone number where you can be reached in an emergency.
2. Cancel all deliveries including mail or have your neighbor pick up newspapers and mail.
3. Use clock timers that activate lights and radios to give the impression that someone is home.
4. Store valuables in a safe, out of reach place (safe, security box) or take them with you.

Securing Your House

1. Make sure front and back doors have deadbolts; make sure doors and frames are made from solid unhollowed wood.
2. Make sure windows are locked and secured when you are away.
3. Basement windows should be secured to prevent forcing and the locks should not be vulnerable to attack if the glass is broken.
4. When you are away from home, keep some interior lights burning; this creates the appearance that someone is home.

Spotlight on Mike Nugent

Emily Argo
Flyer Staff Writer

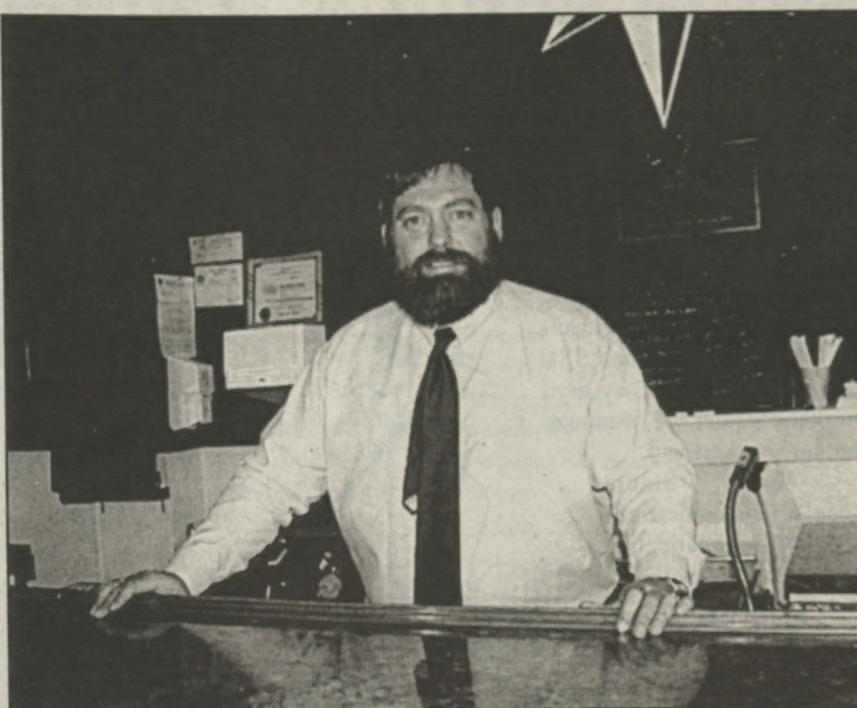

Each week in 'Spotlight,' Emily Argo ventures out into SSU's hallowed halls of academia in search of campus profiles.

This week the spotlight shines on Mike Nugent, the manager of the Crossroads.

As manager of the pub, Nugent is responsible for ordering liquor, maintenance, payroll, budgeting, scheduling and daily operations of the establishment. During the fall semester, he also worked on program planning. Nugent has 41 employees working for him. Nugent said, many workers are needed because most of the employees are students who can only work 19 hours per week.

Nugent was hired for the position in September 1997. He saw an advertisement in The Daily Times and decided to apply. Nugent owned a restaurant and bar in New York City for 17 years. In 1997 he sold Bay Village, which was located on 136th St. and Broadway. Nugent said, "I was retiring, but then I decided to find a job to keep me busy."

Nugent was raised in Amityville, N.Y. for 43 years. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus, the school board and the Yacht Club. He said, "My family has lived in Amityville for a long time, and we make up a large part of the town."

The Flyer/Annie McMahon
Crossroads Manager Mike Nugent came to Salisbury looking to retire but decided to stay busy.

He believes the Crossroads has been a great success and he has had few problems. He feels having an on-campus pub will help eliminate drinking and driving. Nugent said, "Since the majority of the students are underage, we constantly have a problem with underage drinking and checking I.D.s."

Nugent was raised in Amityville, N.Y. for 43 years. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus, the school board and the Yacht Club. He said, "My family has lived in Amityville for a long time, and we make up a large part of the town."

Grover Cleveland spent the night in the house.

He is married and has three sons, James, Kenny and Sean. He said, his family has adjusted easily to the slower lifestyle of the Eastern Shore. Nugent said, "We have a house on the ocean, and now, we have a house on the bay."

He enjoys fishing and being a "soccer mom." He said, all of his children are on traveling soccer teams so he spends many hours on the road and at games.

As a certified school psychologist, Nugent worked for the public school system in Holbrook, N.Y. He was also a visiting professor at St. John's University, where he taught Introduction to Psychology. He recently applied to the doctorate program at Wilmington College. Nugent said, he only needs twelve credits to earn his psychology degree. Nugent said, "I will be taking education classes at Wilmington and transferring credits from St. John's University."

Nugent has been pleased with his experience at SSU. He said, "I haven't met a person who I haven't liked." In the future, Nugent hopes to spend more time with his family. He said, he would someday like to teach at the high school or college level. During the summer, when the Crossroads will be open for shorter business hours, Nugent plans on settling into his new home and new community.

You're driving at a breakneck speed of 30 miles an hour over the Rt. 90 bridge. Ferocious winds tug at your tiny Honda as torrents of rain prevent you from seeing too far in front of you. Your hands are clenched around the steering wheel, cars are on your tail and all you can mutter is "There's no place but home!" While the ride offers a rush of excitement, you are fully aware of the danger in this not so typical drive home from school.

The two nor'easters that battered the Eastern Shore over the last two weeks left commuters faced with hazardous driving conditions and tough decisions. The usual contemplation over whether or not to go to school today was given a twist: is it safe enough to go to school today?

Commuters from several areas of the shore were angered by the lack of cooperation by SSU to cancel classes. Junior Melissa Luckett, an elementary education major, lives off Rt. 54, outside of Bishopville. "My road was shut down for two days because of high water which stopped me from making it to school," she said.

Severe flooding by Luckett's house caused her boat, which was in the backyard on cinder blocks, to float away and then sink into the lagoon. Luckett feels that more classes should have been canceled.

"When both Wicomico and Worcester school districts are closed, I think that SSU should close as well. They need to further consider the commuter situation," Luckett said.

Junior Stacie Greene, a communication arts major, emphatically agreed with Luckett.

"Junior Jeffrey Parsons

Greene, a resident of Sixth Street in Ocean City, said that several roads in the downtown Ocean City area were closed for up to three days.

Greene described the drive to SSU as extremely frightening because of the high winds and fallen trees. After attending two classes, Greene left school early to avoid the high tide that would bring more flooding into the Ocean City area.

While Luckett felt that her professors were understanding of her absence to classes, Greene said that her Greene.

Junior Jeffrey Parsons, a finance major, lives in the residential area of Ocean Pines off Rt. 90. The road leading to his house was also closed because of high flooding, which forced him to find long, alternative routes to school and work.

When classes were canceled on Wed. Feb. 4, Parsons said he waited the storm out at a Salisbury resident's house. "Conditions were even worse when they finally canceled classes," Parsons said.

Even though he made it to all his classes, Parsons said, "Missing a day of school is not as important as saving someone's life."

Provost Philip Creighton made the call to cancel classes in the absence of the President. "We tried to coordinate the cancellation of classes with that of UMES - there are so many students going back and forth between the two campuses. We were watching the storm and were concerned about our commuters all day long," said Creighton.

However, Creighton said that the 1,700 students that live on campus had to be taken into consideration, so the majority of classes were held. That was why a liberal attendance policy was developed, Creighton said.

The students could make up their own mind to whether it was too dangerous to come. We cover such a wide area that it's impossible for us to tell what's going on," said Creighton.

In response to professors that punished absent students, like in Greene's situation, Creighton said that the student should talk to their dean. "It is always up to the academic professor, but if you can't make it to class because of the weather, I don't think you should be penalized," Creighton said.

Dr. Clara Small discusses "Slavery on the Eastern Shore" on Feb. 17

Dr. Clara Small, professor of history at SSU discusses "Slavery on the Eastern Shore of Maryland Just Prior to the Civil War" on Tuesday, Feb. 17 at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium on the SSU campus.

Free and open to the public, the lecture is part of the University's Black History Month series.

Small will pose the following question as the basis for her talk: "If slavery was so mild, especially as reputed on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, why was this area the location of some of the most famous slave escapes and rescues in the annals of American history?"

Small was born in North Carolina. She received a B.A. and M.A. in history from North Carolina Central University in Durham, a second M.A. in liberal arts education (the Great Books) from St. John's in Santa Fe, NM and a Ph.D. in history from the University of Delaware.

Since 1977 she has taught World Civilizations, U.S. History, African-American History, American Colonial History, Civil Rights, Racism and Discrimination and Minority groups at SSU.

Last spring her article, "Abolitionists, Free Blacks and Runaway Slaves: Surviving Slavery on Maryland's Eastern Shore" was published in the book A History of African Americans of Delaware and Maryland's Eastern Shore. Small is in the process of writing a history of African Americans on the lower Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Small's lecture is sponsored by the SSU Office of Multiracial Student Services. For more information please call the Salisbury State Public Relations Office at 410-543-6030.

Men's Basketball

The Gulls moved into fourth place in the Capital Athletic Conference (CAC) with an 82-71 defeat of Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Va. Saturday night. SSU reached the .500 mark, evening their record at 11-11 overall and 6-6 in the CAC. Earlier in the week, the Gulls fell to Goucher 90-81, letting a one point lead slip away in the last 3:32.

Women's Basketball

SSU suffered a heartbreaking 81-80 loss to conference rival Mary Washington on Saturday night. The loss dropped the Gulls into a three-way tie for second place with St. Mary's and Gallaudet. The Sea Gulls hold a 12-10 overall record, with a conference mark of 8-4. Earlier in the week, the Gulls routed Goucher 94-43, led by junior Amy Cooke's 20 points. The Gulls close out the regular season Saturday night against St. Mary's.

Swimming

The Sea Gull swim teams competed in the Capital Athletic Conference Championships this weekend. The three-day event was not complete at press time, so results will be published in next week's edition of The Flyer.

The SSU women's basketball team extended their winning streak to three games with a 94-43 drumming of Goucher College on Feb. 11. The blowout saw 13 different Sea Gulls score, including a strong performance from the SSU bench.

Freshman Tiffany Orsini led Goucher with 11 points. The last meeting between these two teams in Towson on Jan. 17, was much closer as SSU prevailed 97-77. The loss drops the Gophers to 1-19 overall.

SSU, on a three-game winning streak, travelled to Fredericksburg, Va. Saturday to face CAC leader Mary Washington. The Eagles topped the Gulls 100-91 on Jan. 24, at the Maggs Center. "We didn't play our best basketball and we know that. We lost by nine points," Benshettler said. "It's who shows up. Who plays the smartest and shoots the best. That is who's gonna win that game."

The Gulls face CAC rival Marymount University tonight at the Maggs Center.

Sea Gulls pull up short against Goucher 90-81

Sam Atkinson
Sports Editor

The ends of games for the SSU men's basketball team are becoming all to familiar, losing a lead and the game. The wild roller coaster has been out of control as of late for SSU, as the Gulls rode a four-game winning streak and now are in the midst of a two-game losing skid.

In the first half Goucher jumped out early 18-10 but SSU went on a 14-2 run to take the lead at 24-20. The Gulls switched the tempo of the game to the run-and-gun offense they like to play and came up with several steals. The Gulls held on to the lead going into halftime, 40-36.

"It was way too up-tempo in the first half. We had a lot of turnovers and they had a lot to do with that," said Goucher head coach Leonard Trevino. "They shot the ball so well in transition."

SSU came out of halftime flat. Goucher scored the first three baskets in a minute and a half before the SSU bench received a technical foul. After the foul shots and another bucket, Goucher found themselves back in the driver's seat, up 45-43.

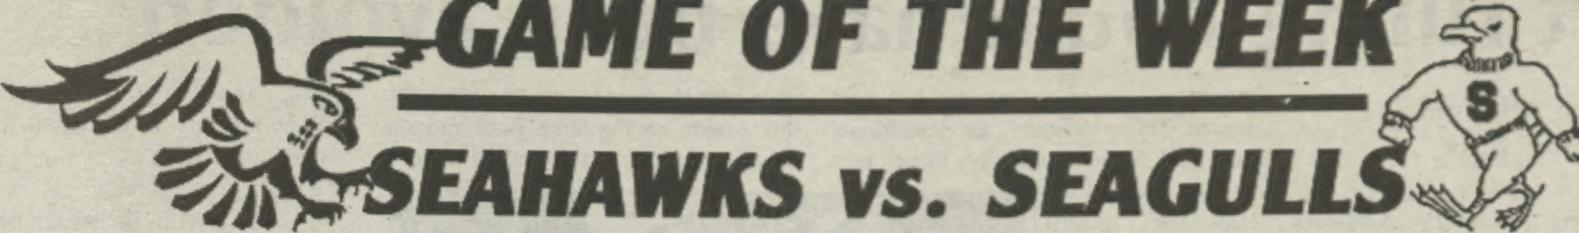

The Sea Gulls stayed close as there were seven lead changes in the game. The Gulls were up 74-73 with only 3:32 left in the game.

SSU prepares for CAC showdown Gulls look for revenge against St. Mary's

Aaron Skolnik

The women's basketball team will close out the regular season Saturday night against Capital Athletic Conference (CAC) opponent St. Mary's College. The Gulls and Seahawks are jockeying for position atop the CAC, along with Mary Washington and Gallaudet.

SSU (12-10 overall, 8-4 CAC), coming off a heartbreaking 81-80 loss to conference leader Mary Washington (16-4, 9-3) on Saturday, stands in a three-way tie for second place with St. Mary's and Gallaudet with only two regular season games remaining.

Before the loss to Mary Washington, the Gulls rode a three-game winning streak, including a 106-82 victory over Gallaudet and a 51 point rout of Goucher, 94-43. "Everyone was clicking," said SSU head coach Bridget Benshettler. Sophomore Jessica Latour lead the team with 27 points in the win over Gallaudet, while junior Amy Cooke handler. "We need to stop [Johnson] if we want to win," said Benshettler.

Johnson, a 5-foot 6-inch point guard, is the Seahawks primary ball

"We're playing well together," said Benshettler. "I'm very proud of this team. This is a young team. We had the toughest non-conference schedule in the league." Robinson steals the role as leader on young Sea Gull squad

Brian Burden
Flyer Sports Writer

The worst part about being a senior and a leader on a team that is rebuilding is that you, as a player, will not be able to enjoy the spoils provided by the hard work and the encouragement you gave to the younger players. Senior George Robinson says that he has no problem being the leader of a team that, after last year's 28-6 final eight appearance in the NCAA tournament, is struggling to make a new name for itself at 11-10.

Unlike a year ago, Robinson doesn't have Randy Clark, Bill Lancaster and John DeRichie to lead the team. The chore of leading this much younger squad has been left to Robinson, fellow senior Matt Golden and junior Eric Prendeville.

Robinson has quietly been the most effective offensive star for the Sea Gulls. He is averaging 17 points a game with a season-high of 28 versus Capital Athletic Conference leader Catholic University on January 28. He has scored in double figures in 20 of the team's 21 year ago, but Robinson admits it's too early to make a judgment about this group.

"I get frustrated at times that our record isn't better because we are a very talented team."

I'm just happy to be a part of the rebuilding process. The freshmen we have now are going to be real good in a couple of years."

With Robinson now in the leadership role, he has had to add a few more dimensions to his game. He has worked even harder on his defense, including rebounding and boxing out. The result is a much more complete, and ultimately, much more dangerous player.

"I know what I'm capable of and I know what we are capable of as a team," said Robinson. "I hope that the work we've put in will make the end that much better."

games and is averaging six rebounds and 2.5 steals per game.

George is just so quick, and he uses that speed to his advantage at both ends of the court. He is a good leader, the type that leads by example. He'll yell on occasion if he has to, but otherwise he lets his actions on the court do all of the talking," said SSU head coach Ward Lambert.

Cart ruling could have been avoided

Sam Atkinson
Sports Editor

The big question this past week has been, "Should Casey Martin be allowed to ride in a golf cart on the Professional Golfers Association (PGA) Tour?" U.S. Magistrate Judge Thomas M. Coffin announced on Feb. 11 that the PGA must make an exception to its ban on motorized carts in tournament play to allow Martin to compete.

The announcement thrilled Martin and his fans who supported the disabled golfer while many PGA golfers and golf traditionists were furious and outraged.

Martin was born with Klippel-Trenaunay-Weber syndrome, a circulatory disorder, in his right leg. He suffers great pain and swelling when walking and playing golf. The one-week nonjury trial came about when Martin sued the Tour under the 1990 Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). This was the first case in which a professional athlete has invoked the ADA to play competitive sports.

This whole dilemma has been blown out of proportion and could have been avoided in the first place. Martin received a temporary injunction last November to use a golf cart on the Nike Tour, which is a step below the PGA, until the trial began. He won the Lakeland (Fla.) Classic in December, the first Nike Tour event of the season.

With the win, the former NCAA second-team all-American golfer from Stanford opened eyes and found larger galleries following his cart around. This is definitely an inspirational story and Americans always like to root for an underdog. However, many people overlook that the next tournament Martin played in, he missed the cut.

Is he really that good? We don't know for sure. The only way to find out is if he plays a full season. Being on the Nike Tour is completely different than the PGA circuit. It is not as recognized and doesn't offer a lot of hope for most golfers. To jump to the PGA level you must win three Nike Tour tournaments or be in the top 15 on the money list by the end of the year.

With the Flyer/Courtesy of AP

issue to court. If Martin doesn't win his own. After not qualifying for the PGA Tour last year, Martin still has to prove himself. Instead of making a big deal about his need for a cart, why not concentrate on his ability? The cart is not going to make the shot.

during a round of golf. Even though this may be taxing with the addition of heat and a close match, a cart would be more of a hassle for a golfer.

A golfer in a cart loses his momentum of being in the game and it's not like Martin is going to drive up exactly where his ball is on the fairway. He will probably have a fair amount of walking to do himself.

Golf traditionists say golf is a game of endurance. Walking several miles in dress pants and shirts in nice warm weather on a private country club sure is rough. If a golfer wants to know about endurance look at an Ironman triathlete. A person that can swim two and half miles, bike 100 miles and end the day on a 26 mile run has endurance.

Tour pro Paul Azinger is now complaining that he could have come back to the tour a few months earlier, as he recovered from cancer, if he could have used a cart. I agree that a sport should not cater to one person, so open riding for everybody. Is everyone happy now?

Probably not, but why should the PGA Tour pros cry over the idea that someone who really needs a cart be allowed to use one? If a person has skill, should you deny him or her of using it? Forget the comparisons because you can't compare this to anything else.

We see people with disabilities everyday but we can't do much about that. Martin himself has said that he would trade all his golf talent just to have a healthy right leg.

Okay, so what happens if he does make it to the PGA Tour? Will players ignore him and segregate themselves from him? Are they going to say, "You lost to the handicapped kid?" Or throw out the cop out excuse of, "He won because of the cart." Martin has already become the main focus of the new Nike slogan, "I can." PGA players crying foul should make a commercial saying, "I can't." What's to be afraid of? Losing to a handicapped golfer just because he is better than you?

It is sickening to hear these complaints from people playing a "rich white man's" sport (Sorry, Tiger.) You have no heart if you can't sympathize for Martin. There are bigger concerns in the world that need our attention. If Martin doesn't make the PGA Tour, this is just an afterthought. What should have been avoided was the negative reaction to Martin's need for a golf cart simply to compete.

Gulls take over fourth place; Catholic clinches top seed

FREDERICKSBURG, Va. — The SSU men's basketball team scored an important 92-81 Capital Athletic Conference (CAC) victory over host Mary Washington Saturday, giving the Sea Gulls sole possession of fourth place in the conference with two games left to play. The win, which avenged an earlier home loss to the Eagles, improved the Gulls to 11-11 overall and 6-6 in the CAC. With York's 76-75 defeat of St. Mary's, SSU moved into position to clinch a home playoff game in next week's conference tournament.

Also on Saturday, visiting Catholic used a 7-1 run in overtime to edge Goucher 91-87 in Towson, Md. The win gives the Cardinals (19-3 overall, 12-0 CAC) the conference regular season championship and home court advantage as the top seed in the tournament. Catholic, which had been battling the Gophers for first place through much of the season, earned a sweep of Goucher in the regular season series. The Cardinals took a 72-65 decision in the teams' first meeting in Washington, D.C. Goucher, which fell to 16-6 overall and 10-2 in the conference, has locked up the number two seed.

SSU hosts third-place Marymount (11-11, 8-4) at 7:30 p.m.

Gulls. Mary Washington improved to 16-4 overall and 9-3 in the CAC, while SSU fell to 12-10 and 8-4.

Heading into Saturday, four teams shared the top spot with identical 8-3 CAC records. SSU and Mary Washington were joined in first place by St. Mary's and Gallaudet. Both the Seahawks and Bison lost Saturday, creating a three-way tie for second place. York dropped St. Mary's to 14-7 and 8-4 with a 68-49 win, while Marymount's 91-79 win moved Gallaudet to 17-5 and 8-4. The Gulls host Marymount at 5:30 p.m. today and St. Mary's at 5:30 p.m. Saturday. One win this week will assure SSU of a home playoff game next Tuesday.

second half. Senior George Robinson led the Gulls with 20 points and nine boards. Freshman C.J. Jarmon added 15 and junior Eric Prendeville had 14, with 12 coming from the foul line.

The loss dropped SSU to 10-11 overall and 5-6 in the Capital Athletic Conference (CAC). SSU is now fighting for fourth place in the conference with St. Mary's College who comes to the Maggs Center this Saturday.

Gopher junior Bakari Ward had a game-high 29 points, scoring 19 in the second half. Ward has scored at least 20 points in his last 10 games and was 12-15 from the charity stripe. "We were afraid of [Ward] because he's though. Man to man he ate us alive," Lambert said. "Until we understand where he is on the court we're in big trouble with them. He's good."

Ward, a 5-foot 10-inch guard, also had a game-high six steals, none bigger than the one he had at the 15:28 mark in the second half when he stole the ball at half court and went uncontested to the basket for a two-handed dunk. "[Ward] made a lot of steals at critical times. He made a good decision by slowing the tempo down," Trevino said.

Goucher sweeps the regular season series between these two ball clubs as the Gophers won the previous meeting 100-81 on Jan. 17 in Towson. Goucher also holds the advantage in the overall series, 6-3. Goucher improves to 16-5 and 10-1 in sole possession of second place in the CAC. "I thought we would get a little better at this point. I guess not yet. Maybe next game," Lambert said. "We didn't play like we're capable of."

Recipient must maintain Education Major status, be full-time student, maintain 3.5 GPA and continue to demonstrate financial need.

Environmental Health Club

The Environmental Health Club invites all to attend our meetings on Tuesdays at 7 p.m. in the Fireside Lounge of the University Center. We are sponsoring a trip to Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant on April 4 for an inside look at the functioning of a nuclear power plant. We are also planning to have speakers come and talk about Environmental Consulting, internships, etc. But we need YOUR HELP to organize these events. Please join us. Visit our table at the Student Activities Fair!

Internships Available

Do you want real-world experience for your resume? Perhaps you're thinking about a career in business, government, health care, law or conflict resolution. The Maryland Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division has internship positions available each semester and summers. You'll learn Maryland's consumer protection laws, be trained to mediate disputes and to provide information through the Division's Consumer Hotline. By interning in the Consumer Protection Division you will gain the unique opportunity to apply this knowledge throughout your life, plus receive academic credit in most fields of study! For more information, call Anne Brooke at 410-576-6519 or see the literature on file at the Career Center.

Worcester County Teacher Association Scholarship: Given to junior education major who is a graduate of Worcester County Public Schools. Must have cumulative GPA of 2.5 or better and have desire to teach in Worcester County.

Louise Moore Child Care Scholarship: This scholarship's purpose is to provide financial assistance to students whose career goal is early childhood development or other fields related to children. Applications are available at Tiny Tot, Inc. beginning Feb. 1. Eligible students must have past experience working with children. Preference will be given to former affiliates of Tiny Tot, Inc. Deadline for applications is March 30, 1998. Call 410-749-7294 for an application.

Seniors—Graduation Application Deadline

All undergraduate students who plan to complete degree requirements in December 1998 or January 1999 must complete an Application for Diploma in the Office of the Registrar by Monday, March 2, 1998. There is no graduation fee. The purpose of this early application deadline is to allow time for each senior's records to be reviewed in detail prior to their last semester of attendance at the university, and this insures that students are aware of their academic status early enough to make any last-minute adjustments to their plan of study. Please return your completed Application for initiates Amy Moran and Megan Joy. ΔΓ is proud to call you our sisters. Another congratulations to all of the new members; we're looking forward to having you as part of our chapter. Happy Sweet Sixteen to Lara Ricci. Good luck to all of the new officers.

Greek Council

It's the start of a new semester and some things need to be squared away. Grades and dues are due. Coming up is Meet the Greeks and NCUR, which needs volunteers. Also, Greek Week needs t-shirt numbers soon with the cost of shirts running between $10-$15.
